

Annual Police Week Events --- The BLUE MASS

For those interested, the Twenty-First Annual Blue Mass for law enforcement and public safety officers will be held on Tuesday, May 5, 2015. Celebration of the Blue Mass is one of the first events in National Police Week and is a fellowship gathering to remember the contributions of those who have served in law enforcement and public safety agencies and to ask for continued protection for them in the future. Unfortunately, due to the continuing challenges faced by those in law enforcement and public safety positions, there is a greater need than ever to focus on these concerns, particularly here in Washington, DC. Representatives of federal and local law enforcement and public safety agencies from the Washington D.C. Metropolitan Area and around the county will attend. We will also welcome survivors and their families to this very moving event.

The Mass begins at 12:10 p.m., and is held at St. Patrick's Church, 10th and G Street, N.W. The principal celebrant and homilist is Archbishop Donald Wuerl. For more information visit the Saint Patrick's web site www.saintpatrickdc.org or call Saint Patrick's at (202) 347-2713.
